SAVES $15,000 IN FOUR HOURS

Illinois Terminal Steals a March on the Wabash in Moving Its Equipment.

Fifteen thousand dollars is what the inois Terminal is said to have saved by four hours' work, late Sunday night at

The road is building a short line and sired to make a connection with the Wabash in order to land on the scene of operation engines, cars, pile drivers and steam shovels for the new work. The Wahash fought the effort and is said by some to have held the crossing at the figure of $15,000. Sunday night the Edwardsville branch

Sunday night the Edwardsville branch train made its last run at 19:20. Hardly had the conjument reached the round-house and sneeds until there stole out from the deliver of the timber along Cahokia Creek, a wilderness of equipment of all kinds. The trains had been in hiding across the creek, but crossed in a hurry and several hundred men jumped out. The cut in the hill was laid with track, part of the Wabash branch term up and a consection established without the trouble of putting in switch or frog, and in a short time all of the outfit had been pushed up the hill. Then the track was sprung back and connected up, the extra rails removed and in a few hours a heavy rain had obliterated the footprints in the clay. Yesterday morning on the first trip of the Wabash branch thain the men were associated to be completed up the strip of the Wabash branch thain the men were associated to be completed up the first trip of the Wabash branch thain the men were associated to see the high hill at I. T. Junction crowned by sixty-five dirt cars, two locomotives and other rolling stock, and not a trace of how they got up in the cloverfield, forty-five feet above the main line.
